

Perfecting hybrid working:

Productivity

If you want to reap the benefits of hybrid working, you're going to need to have a robust, long-term solution in place. That includes devices, management tools and software options designed to maximise your team's productivity, no matter what challenges their environment throws at them. Our Apple-driven solutions are here to help...

Intuitive, mobile technology

Why Apple devices? They're designed to be intuitive, so there's next to no learning curve for new users. And they're designed to be used together, with features like Handoff and iCloud integration making it easy to transfer files from a laptop to a tablet or phone and back again.

The ultimate in dependability

Apple hardware and software are engineered together, meaning fewer issues and far less likelihood a new device will be dead on arrival (vital for remote starters). They're also less prone to viruses and malware, which is important if you have users working from remote locations over networks you don't control. The result of this improved reliability? 48 extra hours of productivity for every user you switch to Mac, according to research conducted by Forrester.¹

The tools you need, wherever you are

Moving to Apple devices doesn't mean losing the benefits of Microsoft 365. As a Microsoft Gold Partner for Cloud Productivity, we can help you take a cloud-first approach to productivity software, so your users can access the same toolkit in every location and from any device.

And it's not just end users who benefit...

You'd think hybrid working would increase the load on your IT team, but Apple's intuitive software and integration with Jamf Pro management software means that tasks like onboarding, troubleshooting and rolling out updates can be automated or follow a self service model, where users help themselves using approved resources. And while they're doing that, your IT staff can focus on moving the business forward.
